

2007 Legislative Outlook

Board introduces bill, watches others

The 2007 session of the Nevada Legislature began February 5. Nevada's legislature convenes only in odd-numbered years for 120 days, unless the governor calls a special session.

Last year the Nevada State Board of Architecture, Interior Design and Residential Design (NSBAIDRD) submitted two bill draft requests (BDRs). The first bill, AB26, amends laws governing the filing of certain documents for business entities. Specifically, the bill prohibits the Secretary of State from accepting articles of incorporation, or amendments, from a business entity if the name of the business contains certain identifying terms related to architecture, interior design and residential design, unless the NSBAIDRD certifies that the business has been registered or approved by the board. The requirements included in this bill are similar to those already in statute for other professions, including engineers.

The first hearing on AB26 is scheduled for Feb. 13, 2007 before the Assembly Judiciary Committee.

The second bill, SB25, amends NRS 623 to allow for temporary certificates of registration for registered interior designers. In the time since the legislation was drafted, the board has decided that because a vehicle facilitating temporary registration is not yet available, it will request the bill be withdrawn. The board will consider introducing similar legislation in the future if NCIDQ develops a vehicle, similar to NCARB's certificate program, for interior designers.

In addition to supporting board-sponsored legislation, board staff will be tracking legislation of interest to the design professions. Currently, the board is

Board Clarifies Residential Designer Scope of Practice

Board members were presented with the following question at the January board meeting: Can a residential designer provide mechanical, plumbing and/or electrical (MP&E) drawings for a project if he is not designing the entire residence?

Board members said that according to NRS 623.025, MP&E is within the scope of services a residential designer may provide. However, MP&E must be part of a total package, because if it is a service offered on its own, it is the practice of engineering. Residential designers do not have an exemption allowing them to practice engineering, as architects do (NRS 625.500). Therefore, the board unanimously agreed that a residential designer may not provide MP&E drawings if he is not designing the entire residence.

Residential designers or other interested parties who need further clarification of this matter should call the board office at (702) 486-7300.

Complying with the Law When Associating with Out-of-State Firms

Nevada is one of the fastest growing states in the country. This rapid growth has led to a proliferation of out-of-state, unlicensed design and architectural firms practicing architecture, registered interior design and residential design for Nevada projects. When an unlicensed firm wishes to work in Nevada, it has two choices: (1) get someone in the firm registered in Nevada, or (2) associate with a Nevada-registered firm. Likewise, if an unlicensed individual wishes to provide services for a Nevada project that fall under the practice of architecture, registered interior design or residential design, he must either become registered or associate with a Nevada registrant or firm.

If an unlicensed firm or individual approaches a Nevada registrant to associate for a project, the registrant must make sure it is done properly, or risk violating the law.

NRS 623.270 Grounds; conditions for probation.

1. The board may place the holder of any certificate of registration issued pursuant to the provisions of this chapter on probation, reprimand him, fine him not more than $10,000, suspend or revoke his license, impose the costs of investigation and prosecution upon him or take any combination of these disciplinary actions, if proof satisfactory to the board is presented that:

(e) The holder of a certificate has aided or abetted any unauthorized person to practice:

- (1) Architecture or residential design; or*
- (2) As a registered interior designer.*

It is the Nevada board's opinion that in order for a registrant to work with an unlicensed firm or individual, the following three elements are required:

(1) The registrant must have an agreement with the client. He must keep appropriate records to show that the unlicensed firm or individual has been under the responsible control of the registrant from the beginning to the end of the project.

(2) The registrant must have a written agreement with the unlicensed firm or individual showing that the firm or individual is contractually under the responsible control of the registrant.

(3) The unlicensed firm or individual may act only as a consultant to the registrant.

The registrant will be viewed as not having the responsible control that is required to protect the health, safety and welfare of the public if he works with an unlicensed firm or individual on a project without having a written agreement and appropriate records. This is considered aiding and abetting unlicensed practice and is a violation of NRS 623.270. The unlicensed designer will be viewed as practicing architecture, registered interior design or residential design without a license, a violation of NRS 623.360.

If you have any questions regarding this matter, please contact the Enforcement Division of the board at (702) 486-7300.

Enforcement Actions

(October 6, 2006 - January 10, 2007)

Inquiries are routinely sent to both registrants and non-registrants for alleged violations of the Nevada Revised Statutes (NRS) and Nevada Administrative Codes (NAC). There were nine cases this period that were submitted for board consideration and approved. Additionally, eight cases were closed this period because there was no basis for the allegations or the complaint did not fall within the board's jurisdiction.

The following cases were closed by means of settlement agreement. As part of the agreement, respondents agreed to assure compliance with Chapter 623. Should the respondent be involved in a subsequent case and found to have again violated a NRS or NAC, the case may be used as an aggravating factor.

Every effort is made to ensure that the following information is correct. Before making any decision based on this information, you should contact the NSBAIDRD.

Not in Responsible Control, Aiding and Abetting Unlicensed Practice, Making False or Misleading Statements: NRS 623.270.1(d)(e)(f) and Rules of Conduct 3.4, 5.2 and 5.5

Case No. 06-051R

The allegations against Dennis T. Mitchell (Reg. No. 3320) were that he did not have responsible control over drawings, which he signed and sealed, and aided and abetted the unlicensed practice of architecture for a retail tenant improvement project. It was also alleged that he made false or misleading statements. The matter was resolved through a settlement agreement incorporating a "No Contest Clause," an administrative penalty of $8,000 and investigative costs in the amount of $2,700. He was also placed on probation for one year, the terms of which include passing the Nevada Registration Quiz, completing the NCARB Professional Conduct monograph, cooperating at all times with board staff, and making all documents immediately available upon request of board staff.

Deviation from Standard of Professional Care and Acting without Reasonable Care and Competence: NRS 623.270.1(c)(f) and Rule of Conduct 1.1

Case No. 06-005R

The allegations against HKS Architects, Inc. were that it deviated from the normal standard of professional care generally exercised by other members of the profession, and by not acting with reasonable care and competence in the preparation of fire protection reports submitted to the building department for official use. The matter was resolved through a settlement agreement incorporating a "No Admittance of Guilt Clause," and administrative penalty of $10,000 and investigative costs in the amount of $2,500.

Nev. Power Revises Residential Standards

Nevada Power Company has asked that the following information be provided to Nevada registrants, specifically residential designers and architects who design homes. It is important that registrants comply with all state and local codes and standards, which includes the 'Nevada Power Electric Service Requirements.'

If you have any questions about this topic, please contact Tony Simmons at Nevada Power at TSimmons@nevp.com.

Dear Design Professional:

On behalf of Nevada Power Company (NPC), I would like to take this opportunity to inform our colleagues in the design community that our standard (RPI-02) for residential service is being revised to include more drawings of acceptable service locations and other details. I would also like to provide some tips that will help avoid problems that have occurred during the construction stage of projects in the past.

- A significant change in the Southern Nevada Amendments to the 2005 National Electric Code is the provision of Article 230.70(A)(1) clarifying that the service equipment is permitted to be detached from the building. This is beneficial for designs where architectural features prevent installation of the service equipment in NPC's traditional "ten feet from the front of the house" or when the homeowner desires a higher level of privacy. Venders are developing low-profile service equipment to serve this type of application. The new equipment and the accompanying revisions to the standards are expected to be approved and on our Web page by March 1. Please feel free to review the standard for the new equipment as well as all of NPC's standards at the Web page below:

www.nevadapower.com/services/business/construction/distribution_standards/

- Construction projects have been delayed recently because the service equipment location does not meet the utility standards or because of a note on the drawing that "the contractor is to coordinate the connection to the utility."

To avoid delays, please ensure that the service equipment location on the design meets the utility standards before stamping the drawing and submitting it to building officials for review.

- Electrical designs with more than one meter in a single service equipment present problems. State regulation permits multiple meters only when multiple customers are served or when the service equipment is serving loads under different rate classes such as water pumping and general service. An example of a problematic installation is when separate meters are used for fire pumps, elevators, space conditioning, and general lighting in a building with a single service equipment. The building operator will receive separate power bills for each of these loads instead of one bill and will not receive the benefits of a single meter such as fewer customer charges, etc.
- Nevada Power would be pleased to provide a speaker to conduct a seminar on utility subjects for your professional organization. If interested, simply contact me by email at the address below to schedule a time that is convenient for you.

- This information should help you serve your clients better, which in turn allows us to provide you with more efficient service. Please visit our website in early March for the latest changes in our standards. If you or your team have any questions or comments, please contact me at TSimmons@nevp.com.

We extend our sincere appreciation to the staff of Nevada State Board of Architecture, Interior Design and Residential Design for placing this information in this publication and look forward to working with each of you in the future.

Sincerely,
Tony P. Simmons, PE

Letter Sent to Nevada HOAs

Addresses which professionals are qualified to design residences

The following letter was approved at the January board meeting and is being sent to home owners associations around the state.

The board is sending this educational letter to inform the associations and architectural review committees that architects and residential designers are both qualified under the law to design homes in Nevada. It is also posted on the board's Web site.

MEMORANDUM

February 2007

To: Architectural Review Committees and Home Owners Associations

From: Nevada State Board of Architecture, Interior Design and Residential Design

Re: Qualified Design Professionals

It has come to the Board's attention that some architectural review committees and home owners associations in Nevada are limiting who may design homes in their communities to only architects, and are excluding another design professional regulated by this Board, residential designers.

In 1973, the state of Nevada began regulating the profession of residential design. Residential designers, like architects, must meet minimum levels of competency set by the state. A person can be licensed as a residential designer by either being an architect in another state, or by having five years of education and experience in the field and passing a rigorous, two-day exam. Many residential designers have taken classes in architecture or have architecture degrees, and may even have architecture licenses in other states (but lack a national certification required for licensure as an architect in Nevada).

As you can see from the statutes outlined below, the definitions of "practice of architecture" and "practice of residential design" are nearly identical. The only difference between the two is setting: architects are not limited to the type of building they may design while residential designers are limited to residences.

NRS 623.023 "Practice of architecture" defined. The "practice of architecture" consists of rendering services embracing the scientific, esthetic and orderly coordination of processes which enter into the production of a completed structure which has as its principal purpose human habitation or occupancy, or the utilization of space within and surrounding the structure, performed through the medium of plans, specifications, administration of construction, preliminary studies, consultations, evaluations, investigations, contract documents, and advice and direction.

NRS 623.025 "Practice of residential design" defined. The "practice of residential design" consists of rendering services embracing the scientific, esthetic or orderly coordination of processes which enter into:

1. The production of a completed:
 - (a) Single-family dwelling unit; or
 - (b) Multifamily dwelling structure that does not exceed two stories in height and is composed of not more than four units in that structure; and
2. The use of space within and surrounding the unit or structure, performed through the medium of plans, specifications, administration of construction, preliminary studies, consultations, evaluations, investigations, contract documents, and advice and direction.

The Board is confident that residential designers are as qualified as architects to design homes in this state. There is no additional knowledge about the design of homes that architects are required to have that residential designers are not. Because this Board is charged with protecting the public, it would not license an individual to design homes who does not meet set qualifications.

If an architectural review committee or home owners association sees a lack of professionalism or quality in plans from either an architect or residential designer, the Board encourages the organization to report that individual to the Board. The Board takes all complaints against registrants seriously and would investigate any professional who does not practice within the standard of care.

If you have any questions about the standing of a particular architect or residential designer, the Board encourages you to contact the Board office at (702) 486-7300.

NSBAIDRD Late Registration Policy

Registrants whose certificate of registration expired on Dec. 31, 2006 and have failed to renew their registration must pay a late renewal fee of $220, in addition to the $150 annual registration fee.

Per NAC 623.280, registrants who do not renew their certificate of registration within one year of its expiration can renew it before the end of the third year by:

- Submitting a letter of application for renewal;
- Obtaining the board's approval; and
- Paying the required late registration fee ($300).

Registrants who have not renewed their registration within three years of the certificate's expiration date are no longer entitled to have it renewed, but may have their certificate restored. The board will issue a new registration number and certificate if the person complies with the following procedure:

- If the expired certificate was obtained through reciprocal registration, the person must reapply to the board using the same procedure.
- If the expired certificate was obtained through examination in Nevada, the person must:
 - Submit a new application to the board;
 - Submit a certificate of good standing from every state in which he is licensed; and
 - Appear for an oral interview.

For further questions regarding late registration, or to see if your certificate is current, please contact the board office at (702) 486-7300.
